

Great Britain

A wide-angle photograph of the Tower Bridge in London during the 'golden hour' of sunset. The bridge's two massive stone towers are illuminated from below, casting a warm glow. The bridge's blue-painted steel structure, including the suspension cables and walkways, is clearly visible. A red double-decker bus is crossing the bridge, and a few pedestrians can be seen on the sidewalks. In the background, the River Thames flows, and the London skyline is visible, featuring the iconic glass skyscraper, the Shard, and other modern buildings. The sky is a mix of soft orange, yellow, and blue hues.

Subway/ Metro

- The metro is one of the four rapid transportation systems in the UK
- London underground is also called “The Tube”
- There is 11 underground lines that collect up to 5 million passengers per day
- Though efficient in the city, the underground lines do not reach most southern great britain.

Prices

- A one zone train ticket in the UK costs £3.6
- A one zone subway ticket in the UK costs £6.3
- The train is still the most cost-efficient choice out of the two
- The trains also go to more stations/destinations than the subway, so the accessibility is also good

Cars

You drive on the left side of the road instead of the right

Over 75% households in UK own a car

The British road network is comprised of 600 miles of paved roads

Pollution from cars is a big issue so if you enter the downtown you'll be charged a toll

Buses and Taxis

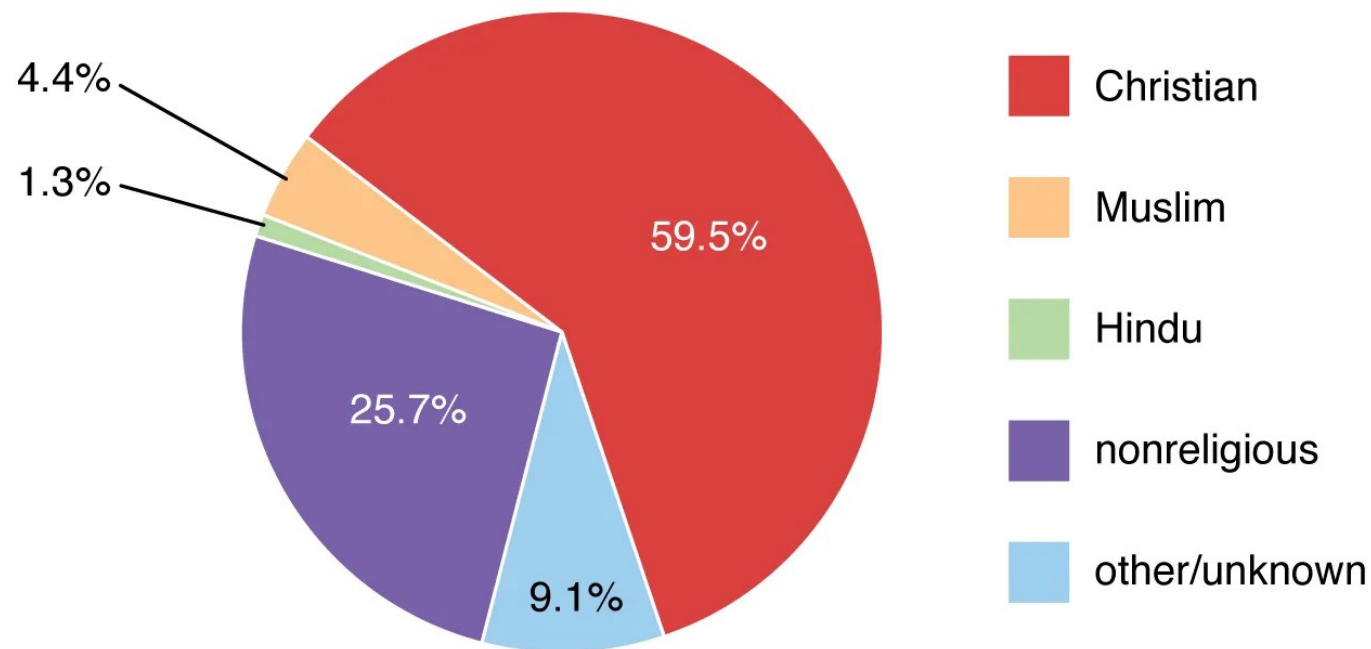

- Black cabs(taxis) are common in London
- Taxi drivers are famously knowledgeable of the city's routes
- You can only call a hail a black cab in the streets
- The most common form of public transport
- There are two main kinds of buses: the red double-decker and red single decker
